EMERGENCY STRATEGIES

Call 111

Emergency Procedure

Any accidents/ incidents and near misses will be recorded by event director

Evacuation Procedure

Evacuation may be required immediately in situations such as severe weather, fires, and earthquake or bomb threats or in coordination with community emergency response efforts for cyclones or approaching storms. The type of emergency will determine the evacuation procedure. The event organisers will directly communicate with event attendees. Depending on the emergency the race organisers may act under instruction from the Police, Fire Service or Civil Defence. Should representatives from these organisations arrive on site they may assume responsibility for communication and evacuation procedures.

Sheltering: Depending upon the type of incident, sheltering inside adjacent facilities (or parts of these facilities) may be the most appropriate protective action. Should this be required, all will be notified via the PA system and directed to follow procedures and report to their designated shelter areas within the facility.

Earthquake Response: Employ the Drop, Cover, Hold method. Try to find shelter away from buildings, trees and other things that could fall. After shaking has stopped head towards the start/finish area and await instructions.

De-Activation: When emergency conditions have dissipated or stabilized, and normal operations have resumed, a formal announcement will be disseminated.

Medical

First aid kits will be on site as will persons who are trained first aiders. Schools are also advised to bring their own first aid kits due to limited supplies.

Weather Policy

If the weather is not conducive to running the championship in a safety conscious manner the event will be temporarily suspended at the discretion of event director. The decision to proceed, alter or cancel the event will be made by the Event Director.

Health Advice

Everyone intending to take part should monitor their health and not come if they feel even slightly unwell, both for their own well-being and that of the other participants.
